THE PALEY STORY
The Paley Center for Media is a non-profit organization dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the history and art of mass media. It was founded in 1975 by Arthur W. Paley, a pioneer in the television industry. The center's mission is to collect, preserve, and exhibit the most significant and innovative works of American mass media, including television, radio, and film. The center's collection includes over 100,000 hours of programming, including classic television shows, radio broadcasts, and film. The center's exhibits are designed to educate the public about the history and art of mass media, and to provide a platform for the discussion of the social and cultural issues raised by mass media. The center's exhibits are also designed to be interactive and engaging, allowing visitors to explore the history and art of mass media in a hands-on way. The center's exhibits are also designed to be accessible to all visitors, including those with disabilities. The center's exhibits are also designed to be educational, providing visitors with a wealth of information about the history and art of mass media. The center's exhibits are also designed to be entertaining, providing visitors with a fun and engaging experience. The center's exhibits are also designed to be inspiring, providing visitors with a sense of the power and influence of mass media. The center's exhibits are also designed to be thought-provoking, providing visitors with a chance to reflect on the role of mass media in society. The center's exhibits are also designed to be timeless, providing visitors with a lasting impression of the history and art of mass media. The center's exhibits are also designed to be relevant, providing visitors with a chance to explore the most current issues and trends in mass media. The center's exhibits are also designed to be innovative, providing visitors with a chance to experience the latest in mass media technology. The center's exhibits are also designed to be exciting, providing visitors with a chance to see and hear some of the most iconic moments in mass media history. The center's exhibits are also designed to be memorable, providing visitors with a chance to take home a piece of mass media history.
